

GUY DUNCAN WEDS.

District Attorney Quietly Married at Adams Hotel, Denver.

District Attorney Guy D. Duncan and Miss Ida Lillian Crocker were married at the Adams hotel, Denver, Monday, August 3, and are now on the Western Slope enjoying their honeymoon. Mr. Henry O. Andrew, partner of Mr. Duncan, knew nothing of the matter when asked about it by a Camera reporter. He knew that Mr. Duncan left Monday for Grand Junction and Silverton "on business." The district attorney stole a march on his friends, though his attentions to Miss Crocker had been observed and their engagement taken for granted. The lady is a tall and graceful brunette and came here from Norwich, Conn. Her friend, Mrs. Setchel, of Denver, who formerly resided in Norwich and Mr. Howard S. Bushnell, also a friend of the bride, from Providence, R. I., were all who were present, save Rev. R. M. Tinnon, who performed the ceremony. On their return within a fortnight, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan will be at home in a pleasant house on University hill.

The groom has been one of the prominent lawyers and business men of Boulder for many years and attended the University of Colorado. Three years he was assistant district attorney and during that period became the real power in the construction and management and subsequent sale of the street railway. When the fusion forces were deadlocked on district judge and district attorney, the entire matter was left to Governor Thomas, Senator Teller and T. M. Patterson and they selected Mr. Duncan to be district attorney. This became his nomination and he was easily elected. With his partner, Henry O. Andrew, he has handsome offices in the Rogers block.
